DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-3,5,7-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crouse et al (USPN 5925990) and in view of Goder et al (USPN 5978195).

Regarding claims 1-3,5,7-24:

Crouse et al discloses a microprocessor controlled electronic ballast for a gas discharge lamp. The ballast 50 includes an inverter 54, which contains a microprocessor 65, and driver 67 driving MOS transistors Q3 and Q4, alternately; and forming, along with capacitor 36 and inductor 35, a half bridge, series resonant, direct coupled output signal generator; thus driving the lamp 39 with a pulse voltage waveform. Microprocessor 65 couples high frequency pulses, which contain programmed information as inputs to the driver 67, along with a disable signal input 71 for shutting down the inverter output to the lamp, due to abnormal voltage conditions and, in addition, an analog fault detector can adjust the duty cycles of the high frequency pulses to provide regulation of the output voltage of the ballast, see col. 2, lines 39-55. The programmable microprocessor inherently allows modification due to overload conditions and/or shutdown of the inverter; see Col.8, lines 33-67.

Crouse et al does not disclose selective protection of transient fault conditions of any circuit, although implied. Goder et al discloses a circuit protection arrangement 100 that includes multiple fault protection features useable in overload conditions of power conversion circuits including those with PWM controllers. Transients are discriminated against by soft start delays and other timing programming features, see col. 1, lines 55-67; Col. 2, lines 37-60; Col. 3, lines 4-45.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have modified Crouse et al by the teachings of Goder et al to avoid dissipating additional power in case of a temporary fault due to reset by timing programming.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 4,6,8 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
